Outdoor Ministries To Be Celebrated

Members of the congregations of the Upper Susquehanna Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America will celebrate outdoor ministries later this month. Congregations will join together to celebrate the annual "Camp Mount Luther Sunday" on January 20, 2013. The Upper Susquehanna Synod Council designated that the third Sunday in January each year be "Camp Mount Luther Sunday" to help promote outdoor ministries in the synod.

Camp Mount Luther is an extension of the ministry that is done in local Lutheran congregations. The camp is asking that congregations promote the camp on that Sunday or designate another Sunday this spring to do so. Ways to promote the camp include bulletin inserts to share with congregation members, Temple Talks, camper testimonials, bulletin board displays, special camp music during Sunday school and church services as well as special offering being collected. All are expected to be done during this event on January 20.

Libraries To Receive Tax Forms Late

Tax season is upon us and local public libraries in the area will have basic tax forms available for patrons. However, due to recent changes in the tax code, as part of the "fiscal cliff" legislation, many of those forms will arrive later than usual.

The IRS has not yet announced when taxpayers can begin filing 2012 tax returns and many of the publications and forms used are currently undergoing revisions based on new laws.

The following libraries will make these forms available as soon as they are received from the federal government - in Snyder County: Beavertown Library, McClure Community Library, Middleburg Community Library, and Rudy Gelnett Memorial Library (Selinsgrove); in Union County: Herr Memorial Library (Mifflinburg), Public Library for Union County (Lewisburg) and West End Library (Laurelton); in Northumberland County: Degenstein Community Library (Sunbury), Priestly Forsyth Memorial Library (Northumberland), Milton Public Library, and Montgomery House/Warrior Run Area Public Library (McEwensville). Additional forms will be available to download from official state and federal websites, as well.

For more information on tax information available, contact your local public library or visit the IRS website at www.irs.gov.

Expanding The Impact Of New Berlin's Energy Conservation Project

community where it is occurring. The project was designed to be replicated, to serve as a model for others to follow. With this in mind, the Energy Center recently hosted a delegation from the Pennsylvania Energy Program (PEP), made up of the seven Local Development Districts (including SEDA-COG) which serve our state's 52 Appalachian counties.

They visited Michael and Mary Palermo, whose 94-year old home makes use of various energy sources and fuels. Solar thermal panels on the roof heat the home's water and provide radiant floor heating. A modern, attractive coal stove keeps the living room warm. There's even electric baseboard heat, but the Palermos rarely use it, and their yearly oil bill has been significantly reduced.

The PEP delegation also visited the home of Julianne Finkbinder, who refers to herself as the "...light police..." as she goes around her house turning off lights left on by other family members. The Finkbiners use a wood stove in their basement family room, and a wall-mounted mini-split-system heat pump to cool and heat their first floor. They're also using TED, i.e., The Energy Detective. It's an energy monitor, provided through PPL Electric Utilities, which tracks minute-by-minute energy use and costs.

Later, during lunch with the PEP delegation, Mrs. Finkbinder strongly advocated for the community's continued efforts to conserve energy after the formal project in New Berlin ends in 2013. She said economic hardships, such as many in her town have experienced, may force individuals to put off energy conservation measures until they're better able to meet the initial cost. "But," said Mrs. Finkbinder, "the education provided by this project will help people to reduce their energy costs in their time, in their own way."

The Western Union County Youth Center's Free "Friday Fun Night" Program

The Western Union County Youth Center, located near the West End Library, offers a weekly, free Friday Fun Night program to the youth of Union County. 2012 was a busy and successful year for the Youth Center, with an average attendance of between 35 to 70 children, grades K-12, each week. There were many exciting programs and special events, but the highlight of our year was the Ecology Awareness Program.

The Ecology Program was held on September 7, 2012 and led by local biologist Mike Bilger, of EcoAnalysts, Inc. Shannon Burkland-Stamm, Sam Silknetter and Janet Bilger helped with the program, as well as many adult volunteers and parents.

Our group of children and adults explored a nearby stream, carefully collecting specimens of aquatic creatures. These live specimens were examined under microscopes, then safely released back into the stream. It was a fun and educational evening. The adults had just as much fun as the kids, as we learned more about the importance of our local streams and ecosystems. Many different "critters" were examined including: native crayfish, water pennies, mayflies, minnows, crane flies, stone flies, snails, dragonflies, trout and long-nosed dace. We learned about the invasive rusty crayfish and the delicate balance of life in ecosystems.

Thank you to everyone who helped make this special event possible!

"Friday Fun Night" has been available to area youth for nearly 20 years. It began as a mentoring program in 1991 with the goal of providing a safe place for young people to meet and socialize. The program quickly grew, and Fun Night was moved to the basement of the former Laurelton Center. In 2004, the Western Union County Youth Center and Hartley Township were awarded multiple grants to build a permanent home for the Youth Center, and a community Recreation Center. The Township provided the land, and the grants paid for the building, which is now the Hartley Township Recreation & Youth Center. The Western Union County Youth Center re-opened in March 2009, and has been growing ever since! Parents are needed to volunteer, to help keep this important program going.

The Youth Center offers a full size gym with volleyball, basketball nets and more. Activities include: monthly crafts, Wii games, Karaoke, pool table, foosball, air hockey, special programs and activities. All programs are free of charge. The Youth Center is open most Fridays, from 6:30-9:00 p.m., unless schools are closed that day.

The Western Union County Youth Center operates on small grants, fundraisers and donations and is a Member Agency of Greater Susquehanna Valley United Way.

Legion Donates for Christmas Party

Lewisburg American Legion Post 182 donated funding to host a Christmas Party and Meal time December 8th at the Milton Developmental Services. PA Dutch Life & Culture

The current flu epidemic brought to mind the flu epidemic of 1918... I've had information from some of you about experiences you either remember or heard about from that time and I'd like to know more to share, so please send them to me.

But now, for the next several weeks, I'd like to share with you information about some of the "Old PA Dutch Remedies" that I've found...

In days of old, the woman's role was, as sometimes is today, the family nurse and doctor. It was her responsibility to diagnose illnesses and help the patient to feel better, and hopefully get cured. She carried in her head a vast store of "folk remedies" that had been passed down to her from her mother and grandmother.

When a particularly unusual or vexing set of symptoms presented itself, the neighboring women were consulted in order to seek a more effective cure. In the course of these conversations, newly gleaned remedies were often recorded in the woman's personal recipe books for future use.

As a result, home remedies in manuscript recipe books and hand-written home remedies in old printed cookbooks are common. Nineteenth century newspapers often carried brief articles about quick and miraculous cures. These were often copied or cut out of the newspaper and pinned with a straight pin to the page of a recipe or cookbook.

There are two types of herbal remedies commonly found in the folk traditions of the PA Dutch areas. Earlier remedies found prior to the Industrial Revolution of 1800 to 1825, consist of herbs, barks and/or roots made into either a tea, salve, ointment, poultice, plaster or syrup.

But then after the Industrial Revolution, remedies were developed using coal oil (kerosene), pine tar, turpentine, benzene, camphor, patent oils or extracts and certain chemicals such as alum and nitre in mixtures with herbs, barks and roots. All these chemicals, drugs and other products were available to purchase at the local general store.

(Paraphrased and used with permission from the Boyertown Area cookbook)

More next week... I'm sure you all have heard of many of the Dutch remedies and cures that were used in the "olden" days. Please send me some you think of... maybe some you still use and others that you may remember from when you "were a kid."

And another question... What is "salt pork"? I have seen recipes listing it and am wondering... is it a chunk of bacon? Please let me know! Thanks!! Jean Markley Keiser, 1133 Carolina Ave., West Chester, PA 19380 bjkeiser@cheerful.com (change back to 'cheerful.com')

Speeds Up In Daytona Testing

By Gerald Hodges/the Racing Reporter

Speeds were up during last week's preseason testing of the new car at Daytona.

Several times cars running in packs were timed at nearly 200 miles per hour.

Jeff Burton had the fastest speed of the three-day test at 194.620 mph. In the draft, the top speeds were 199.650. The top 10-lap average in the draft was 195 mph.

"I think they want us going faster," Burton said. "I think they have a higher comfort level with the roof flaps and all that (and) they think they can get our speeds up."

"They kept inching us up at Talladega (in the test in October) and they got us to this speed, and they seem comfortable with it."

Robin Pemberton NASCAR Vice President of Competition Robin Pemberton said NASCAR had met its goal of slightly higher speeds.

"We know the teams will come back and bring a little bit better this and better that," said Pemberton. "We feel comfortable with that. The racetrack is coming to us a little bit, and speeds will fluctuate a lot — they'll be better on new tires and it will drop off as it goes."

"We're right in the ballpark. We don't foresee any changes."

Trevor Bayne, the 2011 Daytona 500 champion, posted the fastest lap at 199.650 mph.

"The biggest thing was just how the draft was working more like it used to be," said Bayne. "There were no two-car tandems, it was cool being able to back up off the leader and get runs and take the lead and do things like you used to do. It has a little bit more strategy involved than just holding it wide open and hitting the guy in front of you as hard as you could, so I thought it was cool."

The first Sprint Cup race of the season will be the Daytona Shootout, a 75-lap exhibition race on Saturday, Feb. 16.

Prior to the Shootout, the ARCA Re/Max Series will hold their first regular race of the season.

The Daytona 500 will be run Sunday, Feb. 24.

WILL MAYFIELD MAKE IT BACK TO NASCAR

Jeremy Mayfield called into a radio talk show last week and told Brian France that he would like to become part of NASCAR racing again.

"I want to make a serious comeback," Mayfield said according to NASCAR.com "(It would be) very positive towards NASCAR. It could only help both sides, especially if you guys give me another chance and keep it all positive."

Is he being realistic, or is it even possible?

Mayfield was suspended by NASCAR in 2009 and spent three years in court claiming that NASCAR suspended him for a false positive test that he said was for a mix of over-the-counter allergy medication (Claritin) and the prescription medication Adderall.

In addition he faces lots of legal problems, including numerous charges for stolen goods and possession of methamphetamine.

Mayfield believes he can put those charges behind him soon and that he would consider going through NASCAR's Road to Recovery drug rehabilitation program.

Mayfield asked France what he could do to race in NASCAR again.

"Jeremy, you know the path back for you," France said. "It's the path back for anybody. I've always hoped that you would choose the right path and not litigation and a bunch of other things."

"That's up to you. You have a welcome mat out (for you) anytime you want. There's a stated process that AJ Allmendinger just went through and we welcomed him back and it's terrific. That's up to you."

Mayfield's call to France was just another strange twist in a bizarre story that would only increase in tempo if Mayfield actually tried to race again considering the combative history and strained relationship between the driver and the sanctioning body.

Other problems developed around him after leaving NASCAR. His home was raided by police in 2011 and he eventually was charged with numerous felonies, one for possession of methamphetamine and 18 for larceny, breaking and entering and possession of stolen goods.

These charges carry a maximum of more than 40 years in jail, if found guilty of all counts. But Mayfield said he and his lawyers have almost reached a plea deal that would not require jail time.

Mayfield is looking on the positive side, but there are many negatives working against him. He is 43-year's old and has won only five Cup races in his career. If he were to some how get out of all the charges against him without landing in jail, he would still have to complete NASCAR's drug rehabilitation program before being reinstated.

AJ Allmendinger was reinstated after a year, but he did not resist NASCAR on the charge. To the detriment of Mayfield, he fought NASCAR in court for over three years.

NASCAR is the type organization that doesn't like for someone to buck them or put them in a bad light, and Mayfield did exactly that.

The case involving Curtis Turner in the 1960s comes to mind. He bucked the powers that be, by trying to organize a drivers union, and it was over five years before the France family reinstated him. I believe the same thing would happen if Mayfield returned.

But let's go to the bottom line. Mayfield wasn't setting the racing world on fire before he was forced out. Now at his age, and after having been away from a race car for several years, who would want to take a chance on someone like him with all his less-than-favorable publicity?

He would be bringing too much baggage for any reputable sponsor to accept.

From my standpoint, he needs to learn another line of work.

PATRICK WON'T RUN INDY THIS YEAR

"I can confirm to you today that I will not be doing the Indy 500," Patrick said. "I'm just going to do the Coke 600. The team and I decided to focus on Cup. It's going to be plenty of work as it is."

"It's going to be important for me running for the championship full time for the first time to really keep myself focused with the Cup car."

Last year, Patrick also focused on Charlotte as one of her 10 Cup races while she also ran a full Nationwide schedule. This year, that schedule will flip with the full Cup slate and about 10 Nationwide races.

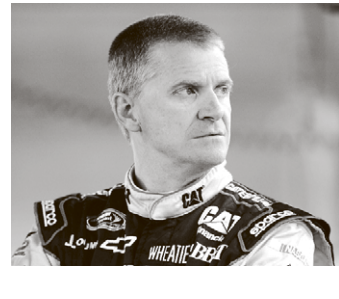

Which Nationwide team she will race for is still to be finalized. She said she has talked to Turner Scott Motorsports but hasn't signed a deal.

"I'm not sure if that is completely set," Patrick said. "I know there have been some reports that have come out about running for Turner. We're definitely talking to them and trying to figure it out."

"We're definitely working on that but there's nothing signed yet. The exact dates and the races and the sponsors have yet to be confirmed for all that."

Meadowbrook Christian School Service Project

Meadowbrook Christian School preschool students Caleb Stetler, Carrie King, Wyatt Heintzelman, Sidney Dame, Alyson Nicholas, and Emma George with snacks purchased through the MCS Preschool Christmas Service Project for Kelsey's Dream Snack Pack Program

Each year Meadowbrook Christian School's preschool classes participate in a Christmas service project. This project helps to teach the children about the joy of giving and also provides a blessing for an area organization. This year Meadowbrook chose to support Kelsey's Dream, a local non-profit founded by Kylie Kuhns in memory of her sister, Kelsey, who passed away in 2005 at the age of 12 from complications associated with ALL Leukemia.

Kelsey's Dream seeks to "make life a little brighter for children with cancer and children in need through community involvement," and Kylie has added programs to the non-profit which relate to Kelsey. One such program is the Snack Pack Program, which is the area Meadowbrook's preschool chose to participate in. Often children undergoing treatment for cancer are on steroids, which make them very hungry, and they are away from home for long periods of time for treatment. The Snack Pack Program provides these children with many snacks from which they can choose and brings smiles to their faces.

Meadowbrook students in Nursery School, K4, and K5 were encouraged during the month of December to find ways to earn or raise money though doing small chores or projects around the house or through working together with their families. They were to then use the money they earned to help purchase snacks for the Snack Pack Program. Through their hard work, the students were pleased to present Kelsey's Dream with ten grocery bags and several large boxes full of snacks to help them make life a little brighter for other children in our community who are in need.

Ding-a-Ling Day Celebrated at Penns Creek and the West End

Bells have had a lot of meaning in our lives whether it be celebrating a birth, a wedding, a holiday or just for fun to ring-a-ling-ling. Both Penns Creek and the West End Senior Centers brought in their favorite bell either to wear or carry in. The West End dingers were, front row, left to right: Ruth Nogel (wearing a bell pin), Betty Zechman (her bell in hand), Elaine Noll (a cow bell, necklace she made and pin and a bell from Valley Forge). Back front, left to front: Lucille Mulrooney (wedding bells in hand), Carol Stover (necklace), Sylvia Bierly (earrings and lit up necklace) and Grace Weidensaul (wedding bell in hand). The Penns Creek dingers were, back row, left to right: Lois Fausey (earrings), Grace Benfer (bell necklace and pin), Gladys Swartzlander (handbell), Elaine Noll (cowbell, necklace she made and pin and Valley Forge bell), Grace Kovacs (handbell), Carolyn Landis (necklace and earrings), Dianna Hassinger (necklace and pin), and Frances Stover (shoe bells). Front row, left to right: Susie Fluke (finger bells), Esther Specht (cow bell), Curtis Hackenberg (wrist bells), Connie Wagner (bell necklace she made) and her favorite sidekick with a bell necklace. Thanks to all our great ding-a-lingers—it was fun.
