

Historical Society Annual Dinner/ Program And Awards

Earl E. Brown (featured speaker) talks with David Goehring and Linda Snook at the Union County Historical Society annual dinner on November 8, 2012.

The Union County Historical Society held the annual John B. Deans Dinner and Program on Thursday, November 8 at Country Cupboard restaurant in Mifflinburg. The featured speaker was Earl E. Brown who discussed "Penns Creek Colonial Flour," and the innovative transportation system of the 1800's that moved goods from central Pennsylvania to the Susquehanna River and thence to their awaiting buyers, as far as the Chesapeake Bay.

As is customary, awards were presented to those whose efforts support the appreciation and understanding of local history, our historic environment, and our community.

The Outstanding Service Award was given to Alan Richard of Winfield for volunteering his exceptional knowledge and skill in scanning photographs and preparing photographic images for Society publications and annual calendars, as well as helping in the selection of the photographs; offering the story behind them, which provides a context for the image; and especially for his dedication to promoting the visibility and interpretation of Union County history.

The Outstanding Service Award was given to Linda Estupinan Snook for serving as the Educational Coordinator for the Historical Society; for developing and presenting programs at the Red Bank

One-room School; for bringing her reenacting skills to the classrooms as she demonstrates how folks lived and dressed in Colonial and Civil War era times; for planning the annual county bus tours that takes 4th and 5th grade students to historic locations in Union County. Linda Snook continues as a volunteer in this important position that was originally funded by state grants.

The Historic Preservation Award was given to Bucknell University (Jim Hostettler accepting) for their adaptive reuse of the Dreisbach building at 400 Market Street, Lewisburg, now the Barnes and Noble at Bucknell University Bookstore. The c. 1900 building had been the home of C. Dreisbach's Sons' Hardware Company. Much of the front portion of the building was rebuilt after a disastrous fire in 1941. A commemorative plaque is now mounted on the building to honor the two firefighters who lost their lives bravely fighting the blaze. The austerity of the building facade reflects the World War II era of reconstruction. Many of the architectural elements were carefully restored by hand, including brickwork, woodwork, and steel casement and wooden double-hung windows, the original Otis freight elevator, and a handsome black steel safe. In faded print on the Fourth Street side of the building, the name Dreisbach remains visible.

Nurturing Parenting Program Offered

Bavolek, PhD, author of the program. Dr. Bavolek is a recognized leader in the fields of child abuse and neglect, treatment and prevention and parenting education. Participants will learn the philosophy, hands-on practice and tips for successful implementation and facilitation of the evidence based on NPP.

Was Witt fer Grischtdaag

Dear People,
Have you already written your letters to Santa Claus? If not, then perhaps you could use Solly Hulsbuck's letter. Here it is.
"My dear old Santa Claus: I take pen in hand and sit myself down to write now and make my Christmas wishes known. I thought I would write a letter and tell you that I am a good boy, and everything that I want, then you will tend to it.
"But be careful at our house, the chimney is certainly not fit for having fat guys crawling around on it. Bring us a new chimney along. My stocking hangs at the fireplace; I'll put my full name on it. Of course it's my father's stocking, for mine fills up much too quickly.
"I want a pair of rubber boots, shoes, a new suit of clothes and a hat. A pair of gloves, a fur cap and a watch. I should really have that absolutely. I would also like a pair of steel ice skates, a sled with my name on it, and bring me an Irish goat. He'll pull me up the hill."

(To be continued next week)

And the Dutch:

Nothing at all like a "letter to Santa" would look today, is it? Do children still write them?

This year we'll have two students from China visiting us. They are studying at Penn State and were excited last summer in Beijing when they heard that my husband and I had been students there... (Even tho it was many, many years ago!) Do write or email, I'd love to hear some of your Christmas plans and customs. ## Hospital Holds Class to Educate and Certify Youth in CPR

A special Heartsaver CPR (Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation) class is being offered for youth ages of 12-15 by Evangelical Community Hospital during the holiday school break.

Classes will be held at the Evangelical Community Health Education Center on Route 15 for a fee of $25 for each participant, which covers materials, instruction and a 2-year certification card during the four-hour class. Scheduled during the holiday school break, students can attend one of two classes: Friday, December 28th or Monday, December 31st from 9 am - 1 pm. Pre-registration is required by calling (570)768-3200.

CPR saves lives. Statistics show that the earlier CPR is initiated, the greater the chances of survival. In fact, 100,000 to 200,000 lives of adults and children could be saved each year if CPR were performed early enough. (According to the American Heart Association estimates.)

For youth deciding to get first-time jobs or who have been working, having CPR certification provides the knowledge necessary to be able to provide lifesaving procedures if ever faced with an emergency. Whether lifeguarding, babysitting, working in retail or in other people oriented occupations, CPR provides youth with lifesaving skills they can take with them through adulthood.

Stewart Refuses Indy Challenge For Now

By Gerald Hodges/the Racing Reporter

Tony Stewart has passed up a chance to race for Roger Penske in next year's Indianapolis 500. The three-time NASCAR champion said that he wouldn't attempt to race in both the Indy 500 and NASCAR's Coca-Cola 600 on the same day.

"As much as I would like to do it, we just don't have the time to do it proper," Stewart said. "The IRL is so competitive now, you're not going to just show up like drivers used to do in the past and be competitive. These guys don't leave anything on the table there. You're not going to stroll into the Indy 500 with these guys who race every week and be as competitive as they are."

Penske is the owner of Penske Racing and according to Forbes Inc. has a net worth of $1.1 billion. He earned his livelihood through his career as a race car driver, ownership of the Penske Racing team, as CEO of Penske Automotive Group and his operation of an Indy Racing League Team and others.

Although Stewart turned down Penske's offer for now, Indianapolis Motor Speedway started an online petition where fans can encourage the two-time Brickyard 400 winner to accept the ride.

And that's not all. Several other NASCAR drivers including Brian Vickers, who tried to put together an Indy 500 deal last May but was stymied by IndyCar's engine shortage let it be known they wanted the ride should Stewart refuse.

"I'm serious about Indy," said Vickers. "Would do it in a heartbeat, was not just tweeting to be funny."

Stewart and several other drivers including Robby Gordon have run both races in the past, but the time frame in which the two races are held has always been a problem.

There simply isn't enough time between the end of the Indianapolis 500 and the start of the Coke 600 for a driver to rest.

But Julie Sobieski, ESPN vice president said the television network would support the opportunity for drivers to participate in both races, which might include altering the starting times.

Having a big NASCAR star entered would be a bonus for both the track and IndyCar.

The Indy 500 is also Stewart's favorite race, but he failed to win in five tries and last entered it in 2001.

However, Stewart didn't close the door completely.

"I'm very humbled by the fact that he offered it to us," continued Stewart. "It's a great opportunity, but it's very hard when you're running three Cup teams right now and the obligations that we have making sure that we're doing the right things, we have a lot of people that depend on us."

"It's kind of like being at Thanksgiving dinner. My plate is finally full. I don't know if I can add anymore to what I have right now."

"I'm not going to do it this year, but there's nothing saying that down the road that I may not take him up on that same offer," Stewart said.

However, in an article by Speed Café, Stewart said that he has been approached several times by Paul Morris to have a crack at a V8 Supercar Series race in the shared driver races.

"Paul Morris keeps inviting me out to have a go in one," said Stewart. "I would love to have a chance to drive one. I'd love the opportunity to get behind the wheel of one."

The V8 Supercars will race Stateside for the first time at the Texas 400 meeting at Austin's (Texas) Circuit Of The Americas track from May 17-19 next year.

KESELOWSKI'S EARNINGS OVER 12M

According to NASCAR figures, Brad Keselowski, the 2012 NASCAR Sprint Cup champion earned $12,106,255 dollars this year. He earned $6.2 million in race winnings for winning five races, $150,000 in "special prizes," and series sponsor, Sprint added a bonus of over $5.7 million.

Clint Bowyer, runner-up in the series points race, was only fifth in money won with a total of $7,993,802 and three wins, due to less victories.

Jimmie Johnson, who finished third in the standings, was second in earnings with a total of $10,469,426. Of that his race winnings of $8,129,639.00 was the most of all drivers this year. He tied Keselowski and Denny Hamlin for the most wins, five. Also he had four poles tying him with Kasey Kahne, who also had four poles.

Matt Kenseth who was third in money won, but seventh in the points, took in $8,802,778.50 of which $7,528,332 was race winnings. No doubt his win of the rain-delayed Daytona 500 (his second Daytona 500 win), worth $1.589 million helped propel him to the top of money earners. Kenseth had two additional wins and one pole.

YOUNGER DRIVERS INVADING TRUCK SERIES

For seven consecutive seasons, from 2004 through 2010, the truck driver who raised the championship trophy at season's end had already celebrated his 40th birthday.

In 2011, Austin Dillon, became the series' youngest champion at the age of 21 years, six months and 22 days. Graduating to the NASCAR Nationwide Series this season, Dillon ran away with Rookie of the Year honors.

James Buescher won this year's title at the age of 22 years, seven months and 21 days – the second-youngest champion in series history.

He became the first Texan to win the Camping World Truck Series championship. Buescher especially excelled on the intermediate tracks. All four of his wins, including a sweep of Kentucky Speedway, came at 1.5-mile venues. This season was one of retribution for Buescher.

In 2011, he failed to qualify at Phoenix, the second race of the season. Though finishing third in points, the Phoenix setback spoiled a campaign that otherwise saw Buescher chip in one championship-worthy performance after another. This season, however, he started all 22 races, stationed in the top five points for 20 of them.

Buescher battled Austin's younger brother, Ty, throughout the 2012 campaign. Ty Dillon, 20 years of age, finished fourth in the series.

In fact, four of the top five final points finishers – Buescher, Dillon, Joey Coulter and Parker Kligerman – have yet to turn 23.

The youth movement continues. KESELOWSKI, BOWYER NOT IN SHOOTOUT

NASCAR's top-two drivers won't be in the February Shootout.

The sanctioning body decided prior to the start of the 2012 season to go back to its traditional eligibility requirements for the Shootout, which included pole winners from the previous year and past Shootout winners.

That means Brad Keselowski and Clint Bowyer won't be on the list of 22 drivers eligible for the 2013 event. Not since 2004, when 2003 champion Matt Kenseth did not win a pole, has the Shootout been run without the previous year's Cup champion.

The race used to be sponsored by Budweiser, which originally had also sponsored NASCAR's pole award. When Coors took over the pole award sponsorship in 2009, the eligibility rules changed and continued to change annually.

Racing Trivia Question: Which team does the 2012 Nationwide championship drive for?

Last Week's Question: Which Cup driver is nicknamed, "The Cuban Missile?"

Answer: Aric Almirola, because he is Cuban American.

Mugs for the Holidays

Union County residents Karen Bolus and Shea Madden prepare to enjoy a cup of coffee at Keeley's at 428 Market Street in Lewisburg as waitress Megan Larkin steps up to pour. Bicentennial mugs have also been placed into action at the Hideaway Café at Brookpark Farm and at the Old Turnpike in Mifflinburg.

A Union County Bicentennial riddle is offered this holiday season for the shopper in search of a stocking stuffer for those with a penchant for local history: "What comes from China, generally held something from China, and today is more likely to hold a brew that originates in South America or the Caribbean?" The answer is, Union County's inexpensive Bicentennial tea or coffee mug appearing in holiday colors of red and green—attractive, useful, collectible, and affordable!

These Union County mugs are popping up everywhere. It doesn't seem like a Buffalo Valley cup of coffee or tea these days without the Bicentennial mug as county, township, and municipal officials and employees are likely pouring their Mornin' Joes in these mugs adorned with the Bicentennial logo. Others across the county will be following suit now that the special mugs are beginning to appear in county cafes and soon in homes as well.

Recently introduced at Mifflinburg's Old Turnpike, the Bicentennial mug is the key component of this county's cup of java. Now, at Keeley's in downtown Lewisburg you will also find the tables adorned with the red and green mug and the Hideaway Café at Brookpark Farm also has a number of them in their mug stash.

For the first time, the Union County Bicentennial mug is offered to the public for holiday gift giving for $5 each: at the Union County Government Center at 155 North 15th Street and at Keeley's at 428 Market Street, Lewisburg, and at Mifflinburg's Christkindl Market December 13-15. In addition to the mugs, all Bicentennial souvenirs and official Bicentennial banners will be available during Christkindl in the old Elias Church on South Fourth Street, and available weekdays throughout the 1813-2013 anniversary year at the Union County Government Center on N. 15th Street, Lewisburg.

The Family Place Gives Birth to New Surroundings

A rendering of a completed room at Evangelical Community Hospital's The Family Place. The obstetrics unit will be undergoing renovations starting in December to ensure new moms feel even more comfortable in a more home-like setting.

Renovations will begin mid-December at The Family Place, Evangelical Community Hospital's obstetrics unit. The Family Place renovations will include upgrades to patient rooms, the nursery, labor and delivery suite, family waiting room, as well as throughout the common areas.

"Obstetrics is very important to us. Moms and babies get top-notch clinical care here but they also need to feel comfortable in their accommodations. It is time to match the Family Place surroundings with our quality patient care record," said Michael N. O'Keefe, President and CEO at Evangelical.

The 14 post-partum and four labor and delivery rooms at The Family Place are slated to undergo a facelift that will be completed in nine phases so as not to interrupt the family-centered care environment of the unit or the anticipated deliveries of pregnant moms.

"The Hospital understands that the birth of a baby is a very special time for families; we don't want these planned renovations to interfere with these meaningful and joyous occasions," said O'Keefe. The Family Place will remain open and fully functioning during the 18-month renovation period.

A redesign of one labor and delivery room and two post-partum rooms for patients with special needs is of great significance. This renovation will ensure the Hospital's continued compliance with the American Disabilities Act and that patients needing these types of rooms will have everything they need to have an exceptional birth experience.

What most families and visitors will notice when the renovations are completed is that the upgraded Family Place is designed to focus on the family-centered care experience. A new nurse call system will ensure that moms and babies will be able to connect with The Family Place nurses quickly and easily. Newly renovated birthing suites and post-partum rooms will include new bassinets and other room furnishings, as well as wall and floor coverings upgraded to meet the new color standards of the Hospital. Two new birthing beds will be added, as well as new cabinetry, wardrobes, updates to the unit's common areas and waiting rooms will round out the renovations.

The renovations come at a time when The Family Place has seen a noted increase in mothers seeing the unit as a premiere choice for their birthing experience. In July of 2012, the unit saw a record number of births welcoming 113 "Evan babies" in

Angel Tree Program

Once again this holiday season, Kelsey's Dream is offering the community the opportunity to adopt a child through the Angel Tree program.

The Angel Tree allows individuals to personalize a gift for a child in need by adopting a child and purchasing gifts for that individual. The Angel Tree will be set up at Art of Living Design Studio, 120 Walnut Street, Mifflinburg, on Tuesday, November 20th. You can come by and choose a tag Tuesday-Friday from 9-5 or Saturdays from 9-4. After choosing a child and purchasing the gifts, they should be brought to Art of Living Design Studio by Tuesday, December 4th.

The children represented on the trees are from local families in need. We began to participate in the Angel Tree program for the Nagel family from Lewisburg. They have 4 children, and of the 4 children, 3 have neurofibromatosis. With this disease tumors can grow anywhere there are nerve endings.

Kelsey's Dream's goal is to make sure this family and others in the community have a wonderful Christmas. We hope you will help make this a very blessed Christmas for them. Along with the Nagel's, we have adopted additional children in need through the Salvation Army. These tags will be available, as well.

If you have questions, please contact us at 570-966-4605, or email me at kylie@windstream.net.

We really need your help and hope you will help brighten the lives of these children at Christmas by adopting them and picking up a tag.

Holiday Mail for Heroes

Union County Commissioners signed Christmas cards today at their regularly scheduled meeting, in support of the American Red Cross "Holiday Mail for Heroes" campaign. Collection boxes for County employees and visitors are set up at the Court House on Second Street and the Government Center on Fifteenth Street until December 15 after which time they will be collected by the Red Cross and hand delivered to VA hospitals and veterans in nursing homes, as well as being mailed to those serving around the world. The public is reminded that cards can be signed and dropped into collection boxes at most libraries and banks in the community. An open house will be held at the SUN Area Red Cross Chapter, 249 Farley Circle, Lewisburg on Monday, December 3rd from 10:00am until 2:00pm during which time they can enjoy light refreshments while sending holiday greetings and thanks to members of the military and their families. Homemade cookies are a welcome treat at this event; the public is invited to bring plenty to share. Those not consumed during the open house will be taken to the VA Hospital for residents.

Local Donors Give to Red Cross Hurricane Relief

Members of the Lewisburg Area High School marching band passed around the much coveted little brown jug to accept donations for the American Red Cross, Hurricane Sandy relief fund. The familiar jug became a symbol of giving instead of competition for two consecutive football games. Lewisburg ended up retaining possession of the trophy this year but everyone was a winner as it enabled the leaders of the band to raise $400.00 for disaster relief. Justin Hill, the Band Director said he felt compelled to give to the Red Cross after watching scenes on the news showing such devastation. "My drum majors took the lead from there, making it a priority to have a successful drive; they did a great job," he said.

The Red Cross was also on the minds of American Legion servicemen and women from Kulpmont, PA who gave a donation of $5,000 for disaster relief efforts. Rose Kolvesch and Albert Goodlunas were proud to present the check to Tom Szulanczyk, Chapter Director for the SUN Area chapter. "This is a significant donation and we are truly grateful, there is so much to do to help these folks as they take the first steps toward recovery," he said. Communications Coordinator for the chapter Anne Smith says there are a number of fundraisers that have been undertaken by local residents who wish to assist the Red Cross. "There is some formality involved before anyone can raise funds on our behalf, the usual paperwork to undergo, but we are happy to help folks through that," she said. Ramsey's Jujitsu will hold a demonstration and lessons in many of the martial arts on Sunday, December 2 at LARA's gymnastic center on Market Street in Lewisburg. For more information on ways to help the Red Cross visit www.redcross.org Or the SUN Area Red Cross facebook page.
