All About Nascar, Danica, And The Busch Boys

By Gerald Hodges/the Racing Reporter

The state of NASCAR, Danica Patrick, and the Busch boys was the central theme during this year's Annual Media Tour in Charlotte.

Brian France and Mike Helton, the two top dogs in the NASCAR organization said they intend to build on the success of 2011 as the new season begins with the Feb. 26 Daytona 500.

"The sport is in a very good place and we're going to work even harder to achieve the very best things for the sport of NASCAR well into the future," said France.

France pointed to initiatives begun a year ago – a simplified points structure in all three national series and a "Wild Card" twist in the Chase for the NASCAR Sprint Cup that placed a greater emphasis on race victories – which culminated in what France called "a championship battle that will be talked about for decades to come."

While the 2012 season will be one of continuity rather than major change, NASCAR will introduce electronic fuel injection into the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series and implement rules designed to restore traditional "pack racing" at Daytona International Speedway and Talladega Superspeedway.

"We have had a breathtaking number of close finishes at those tracks, but the fans want a mixture of styles including a return to a more traditional 'pack racing' and that close side-by-side competition that's unique to Talladega and Daytona," France said. "NASCAR and the teams are working hard on this and based on the test earlier this month, we're encouraged that we're making progress."

"The industry has never been more united in growing the sport." France said the organization is "very encouraged" by increased television ratings across its three national series – Sprint Cup, Nationwide and Camping World Truck Series. He also pointed to attendance gains at a number of venues.

"While we are still in a tough economic climate that is still difficult, we are pleased with some positive steps we saw last year," he said.

NASCAR will continue to fine drivers who do not speak well of the sport, but the penalties will no longer be secret.

"If you challenge the integrity of the sport, we're going to deal with that," France continued. "What's really interesting is I can't tell you how many owners or drivers come up to me and say, 'Thanks for doing that because some of these comments were irresponsible and unhelpful to growing the sport.' Now, having said that, you can be critical of things you don't think we're doing well, in particular a race call. You can say, 'I don't think I was speeding; I disagree with that.' We understand that. It's when you go after the integrity of the sport is where we will step in, and they will be public."

"In the past two years, Denny Hamlin, Brad Keselowski and Ryan Newman were punished for making comments that NASCAR deemed detrimental to its brand. Keselowski privately was fined $25,000 for criticizing the switch to fuel injection during a fan forum at the NASCAR Hall of Fame last November. When news of the penalty leaked, it drew plenty of derision from fans and news media.

"In terms of going public with it, we didn't have a real strong position on that. It seemed to bother some people in November when we talked about this. So we didn't feel strongly (about the fines being private). If (making them public) is something that people think is a good thing, we were happy to do it."

As usual, Danica Patrick was swarmed over by the media. She said she is skipping the Indy 500 and temporarily giving up on her dream of winning it to run the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte and use the Memorial Day weekend to focus on NASCAR.

She is also beginning to start reading and believing her own P/R. "The cars are very fast, as you guys saw at the test, so I feel good about that race," she said. "I feel good about Daytona and I think there's a real chance, if luck falls our way, [that we can] perhaps win. A guy like Trevor Bayne last year showed that."

Patrick will be in the spotlight all season and will struggle at times as she continues to adjust to stock cars. We'll have to see how well she can hang in there during the actual races.

Maybe after a couple years she will be ready to challenge for a win. While Kyle Busch is trying to clean up his act after being suspended for a Cup and Nationwide race late last year, Kevin Harvick, who had a couple run-ins with him, didn't hesitate to express his dislike for his biggest rival and to continue to stoke the fire.

"He's just such a jerk most of the time," Harvick said. "... He's really the only guy in the sport, the one guy that I just don't like."

Busch must try his best to stay out of trouble this season – and Harvick knows that – but he has never backed down from anyone and likely won't stand for Harvick continuing to ridicule him.

If Harvick continues to be a thorn in his side, Busch likely will strike back, stirring up more trouble and continuing the long-running feud.

Kurt Busch also was a hot topic during the media tour, with much talk about him losing his ride at Penske Racing at the end of last year and his outlook for 2012 at Phoenix Racing.

Though Busch is driving for an underfunded, single-car team, don't be shocked if he does much better than expected.

Phoenix Racing has Hendrick Motorsports cars and engines and has hired several experienced crewmen. Don't be surprised if Busch wins a couple of races and maybe gets into the Chase.

Racing Trivia Question: Who won the 2011 Daytona 500?

Last Week's Question: What year was the first Daytona 500 held?

Answer: 1959. It was won by Lee Petty.

Letters Written During WW1 From Jay A. Rigel to Family and Friends

Letter to: Mrs. P.F. Rigel
 Date: April 30, 1918
 Location: Camp Sherman

Dear Parents and all,
 Just a few lines this eve as news is scarce. I received the letter on Saturday eve after I mailed the one I sent to you.
 I was to the range several times on Saturday and the last time I got out was about 10:45 PM. So I stayed all night. I had several blankets and one of the boys was with me. He slept on the wagon. We have covers for all the wagons.
 Most of the men are on the rifle range at present. They went out on Saturday and are not back yet. I have baggage and provisions from camp to the range. I was out this forenoon and this afternoon.
 The quarantine was lifted yesterday.
 Norman, you better take care of yourself and not lift too heavy. I feel sorry for the poor crows now but wish I could help shoot a few.
 I was to a picture show this eve. Some of the boys are working tonight. A lot of new recruits came to camp in the last week. Sunday eve they started to pack some of the things in the warehouse. Guess they are going to take some of the men to another camp. I don't know if all of the supply company will go, but will find out when the time comes.
 I got a letter from Wm. today.
 I hardly think I will get a furlough for some time. Maybe if we go to another camp the chance will be better.
 I will send a clipping which I cut from the Cleveland Plain Dealer of today. It is almost bedtime so I will have to close. This leaves me well. Hope it will find you the same.

Love to all, Jay

THOUSANDS SOON TO QUIT OHIO CAMP

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer - April 29, 1918 (Four Regiments, Two Machine Gun Battalions Reported Soon to Transfer, Cleveland Organization Affected; Many New Men Arrive)
 CAMP SHERMAN, CHILLICOTHE, - An early departure for another cantonment was forecast for the four infantry regiments and the three machine gun battalions here today in apparently well founded and persistent rumors. High officers of the Eighty-third division declined to comment on the report.
 The units said to be affected are 327th machine gun, the 329th, 330th, 331st and 322nd infantry regiments and the 322nd, 323rd and 324th machine gun battalions. These organizations, with the exception of the 324th machine gun battalion, comprise the 165th and 166th infantry brigades. The 331st, the Cleveland regiment, and 332nd infantry regiments at present are engaged in target practice on the rifle range. The 329th and 330th infantries will go to the range Friday for six days.
 Statements from responsible officers indicate that an order has been issued providing for the movement of the troops named. It is declared in some quarters that the men will be called some time next month. Officers and men are freely speculating on their chances of getting away from this cantonment.
 (To be continued next week)
 Many men were coming and going. But as 2,147 more men were added to the number at the camp, it really was like a small city. More next week... Jean Markley Keiser, 1133 Carolina Ave., West Chester, PA 19380 bjkeiser@cheerful.com

Dog Licenses Due Now

Union County Treasurer, Diana Weikel, would like to apologize for the renewal notices not being mailed. Bureau of dog law enforcement in Harrisburg is responsible for these mailings. She has contacted them several times to get an approximate date for the renewals but has not received a response.

Dog owners need to purchase 2012 dog licenses that are due now.

If your pet gets lost, a license is the easiest way to identify the owner and return the dog home safely. State law requires all dogs (3) three months of age and older be licensed by Jan. 1 Of each year. Failure to license a dog is a summary offense and could result in a maximum fine of $300 for each unlicensed dog.

Dog licenses can be purchased at the following: Union County Treasurer at Courthouse, Lewisburg Boop's Sporting Goods-(extra charge of .50 Cents), Vicksburg Apply-Pay-Print: To purchase your dog license online (or to get application) go to www.unioncountypa.org or www.padoglicense.com.
