

Dodge Goes Out In Winning Style

By Gerald Hodges/the Racing Reporter

Dodge has said farewell to NASCAR...at least for now. They carried with them the 2012 Sprint Cup Championship Trophy.

It was Dodge's first Cup championship since Richard Petty won in 1975. This one was more surprising and maybe more meaningful since Dodge announced in August it was withdrawing from NASCAR after this season.

"I'm literally conflicted because it's not about winning or losing whether we would stay in or not," Dodge Pres. Ralph Gilles said. "Those decisions were made many months ago for other reasons, but this is the best thing that could happen. The best way to look back on this is a feather in our cap. It's still an amazing accomplishment."

Dodge hasn't ruled out returning to NASCAR, but if they do, Gilles said it would have to be a situation similar to what the company had with Penske.

Meanwhile, Penske has signed a five-year deal with Ford, with Keselowski and Joey Logano driving for the two-car team. Sam Hornish will drive a Nationwide car and selected Cup races.

"This team is phenomenal, and I'm just so fortunate to have them," Keselowski said. "Everybody back in North Carolina and Morrisville that supports this team, I hope you're listening. None of this was possible without them. I feel so lucky to have everyone here, just a dream come true to have a car like the Blue Deuce, and to have fast cars, to have a great team, this is what you dream of as a driver, and I'm just so very fortunate."

This is also the first Cup Series championship for Penske Racing. The closest they have ever gotten to a championship was in 1993 with Rusty Wallace.

"Well, I'll tell you, it's at the top of the mark now," Roger Penske said. "As I told you when Brad and I got together three years ago and we talked about a plan, we executed, but I want to thank all the people in our company, all our 40,000 employees that have helped us. This race shop team is outstanding, with just the reliability of that car and engine and Dodge."

Richard Petty told ESPN that NASCAR was "hypocritical" in fining point leader Brad Keselowski for carrying a cell phone in his car at Phoenix.

Keselowski was fined $25,000 for having the cell phone in his car and tweeting during a red flag situation late in the Phoenix race. He did the same thing during a red flag situation in the season-opening Daytona 500, and was praised by NASCAR.

"I think it's hypocritical because he [did] it at Daytona, and then NASCAR had a big meeting with everybody and said, 'Oh! Man!' said Petty. "That's great. Everybody go out there and do it just as much as you can." And then they say, 'Who! You ain't supposed to do it in a racecar.'"

"I don't think that was in the rulebook. I think they made that one up as they went."

Keselowski said he was confused by the message the fine sent, "I'm confused a lot. I'll just add that to the list."

NASCAR said drivers were told they could not carry cell phones or any other computer-like devices in the car after Daytona because it could create a competitive advantage as the sport moves to fuel injection this year and a digital cockpit that chairman Brian France said could be introduced in 2014.

"We are the most aggressive in social and digital media in terms of our drivers and teams and tracks taking part in that," France said. "Smart devices and smart phones and other devices can have an effect on manipulating the technology that is now going to be in the cars, and we have to be careful with that. And so that's why our policy is that you're simply not going to be able to take a device into the car with you."

PATRICK DIVORCING HUSBAND
Danica Patrick and her husband, Paul Hensenthal are divorcing after seven years of marriage.

"I am sad to inform my fans that after seven years, Paul and I have decided amicably to end our marriage," she said. "This isn't easy for either of us, but mutually it has come to this. He has been an important person and friend in my life and that's how we will remain moving forward."

Patrick just completed her first full season in NASCAR, running the full Nationwide schedule, where she finished 10th in points and 10 Sprint Cup Series races.

KENSETH MOVING ON
Matt Kenseth ended a highly successful chapter of his racing career after spending 13 seasons in the Cup Series with Roush Fenway.

Kenseth's first Cup Series start with Roush Fenway came in the 2000 Daytona 500. Kenseth and his crew chief Robbie Reiser moved up to NASCAR's elite series that season together after both had started out racing in their home state of Wisconsin.

"Just being in that race I remember was a big deal to me," recalled Kenseth. "I remember walking down pit road with Robbie (Reiser) and looking up into the stands and seeing all those fans. Racing against such great drivers like Dale Earnhardt, Rusty Wallace, Dale Jarrett and Mark Martin; all guys who we used to watch race on Sundays and now being able to race against them in the biggest stock car race in the world was a special moment for two guys from Wisconsin."

Just three years after his first start, Kenseth earned the 2003 Cup Series Championship amassing one win, 11 top-five, and 25 top-10 finishes. Kenseth's lead in the point standings has also been credited with the formation of the current Chase format due to the sizable lead he and his team had created.

"There was a lot that went into that Championship in 2003," Kenseth continued. "In 2002, we were able to win five races and had a great season. Going into 2003, I felt like we really had a shot to win the Championship that year. We were able to put it all together that year, and that Championship is always the ultimate prize and what everyone is racing for every year."

Another impressive moment in Kenseth's career came in 2009 when the driver earned his first Daytona 500 victory. The win came after Kenseth started the race from 39th but the No. 17 team had battled back handling issues with pit strategy to place Kenseth in the lead before the race was called on account of rain. He led for only seven laps that day, but they turned into the seven laps that earned the driver his first win in the historic event.

Kenseth went to win the 2012 Daytona 500, joining just a handful of drivers who have won two or more of the sport's famous races.

He will move to Joe Gibbs Racing in 2013.

Girls on the Run 5 K Challenge

By: Kay Poeth

Jillian Fee, Brooklyn Shaffer, Hailey Foresman, Lindsey Snyder, Molly Kerstetter, Susquehanna University running buddy Sarah Dickerson, and Emily Kerstetter are pumped to participate in this year's Girls on the Run 5K Challenge held at Susquehanna University. They are part of the Mifflinburg Girls on the Run program.

Runners pounded the pavement at Girls on the Run 5K Challenge.

The November 17 event was the culmination of 10 weeks of training in the Girls on the Run program. The race weaved through the borough of Selingsgrove with a grand finish at Lopardo Stadium at Susquehanna University. Awards were given to male and female overall and age group winners. The GOTR 5K Challenge also featured a sport and sponsor expo in the field house before and after the race.

Girls on the Run is an afterschool program that uses the power of running to help prepare girls for a healthy living lifestyle. The program focuses on building self-esteem and enhancing emotional and physical health. Throughout the program girls develop greater self-awareness, a sense of achievement, and team building skills. The goal of the Girls on the Run program is help girls become strong, contented, and self-confident young women. The program is designed for girls in grades 3-8 with various sites across Snyder and Union County.

Jeannie Stroup from Middleburg Elementary commented, "The girls have been very enthusiastic and I am very anxious to see how it unfolds today as they run their first 5K." She coaches 23 girls in grades 3-5 with Nicholas Slotterback and Andy Weaver.

Gianna Garcia, a third grade student from West Snyder Elementary, is running her first race. "We stretch, play games, and do cheers. I am excited and nervous about running today."

11 year old Emily Kerstetter from Mifflinburg is returning for her second race. She explained, "We do a lot of self-esteem boosters to feel confident about our self. In this race no matter what our time is, we should do our best and feel proud of what we do."

Sarah Dickerson, a running buddy from Susquehanna University, got involved because she had seen the Girls on the Run at other races. "I think it is a good program to encourage girls to feel better about who they are. It also helps to promote a healthy lifestyle."

Kelsey Bishop from McClure exclaimed, "I am pumped! I have my friends to help me. It is really fun to be here." Her running buddy from Susquehanna University Morgan Lewis added, "I think it's great for young girls to get into athletics. It's a great way to get active, meet new friends, and find your niche."

Chris Snyder, a father of 8 year old runner Kayleigh, remarked, "The Warm-up (Zumba dance) is neat. There are so many activities for the youth. It looks like a lot of fun. I am very excited about the race. I can't wait to see my daughter finish the race!"

Corey Schreffler was running the race with his daughter Tayla. "This is a good turnout and it's good for the kids. It is great to set a goal and accomplish it."

Riley Batorf was kind of nervous before the race but she was confident that she could do it. Her goal was to complete the race in 31 minutes. Her running buddy and cousin Megan Latsha said, "I am excited to be a part of this. I love the mentorship and setting an example to be healthy both physically and emotionally. I like being a role model."

Corinne Theys, Veronica Bingaman, and Ashley Braswell from Selingsgrove were paired up with Brittany Kurtz from Linntown. Last year they completed the race in 30 minutes. This year their goal was to complete it in 20 minutes. However, during the race one of them experienced some difficulty. The girls stayed with their teammate and they all crossed the finish line together. They demonstrated the true meaning of teamwork. "I am so proud of them. They are growing up to be responsible young women." Cynthia Braswell, Ashley's mother, remarked.

"Super, Super Girl Power! Girls on the Run is so much fun!" chanted the young runners just minutes prior to the race. The streets were lined with supporters holding signs and calling out words of encouragement. Rob Swan and Robbie Stahl held up signs and rooted for Haley Stahl and Jamie Swan. Rob Swan commented, "This brings a tear to my eye. The volume of people and the support for the girls is overwhelming." Then he cheered, "Go, Baby, Go! We love you!" as the runners whizzed past.

As she made her way back to the stadium, Molly Bishop remarked, "It is a wonderful program to promote self-esteem and healthy habits in girls. My daughter Kelsey enjoys it and is already planning for next year."

While waiting for the runners to cross the finish line, Dana Kissinger of Selingsgrove said, "My girls (12 year old twins) like it so much that even though they couldn't join because they are now on the basketball team; they still wanted to come and run and participate in the event." Even her 7 year son joined his twin sisters in the race.

"My youngest one (Sophia) is running for the first time. I am getting so emotional. I am filled with pride and excitement." commented Jody Ramer.

The runners crossed the finish line to applauding and cheers from the crowd. Each girl received a necklace for completing the race. The 3.1 mile race created memories to last a lifetime for the participants.

Chesney Mattern simply said, "I am proud of myself for running the race."

Her mother Tami Mattern agreed, "What a sense of accomplishment. Wow! The crowd is so encouraging."

Organizer Cheryl Stumpf noted how the event has grown. In the first year there were only 50 total participants including girls, coaches, and running buddies. This year the total is 437! The event has more than doubled in size since last year. The next 5K in the series will be held on May 11 at the Middlecreek Area Community Center.
