PA Dutch Life & Culture

For the rest of the summer, I'll share some of the articles from the "early days" of this column. This was the first one in March, 2004.

PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH POEMS, RECIPES AND STORIES

Through the years, I've collected many recipes, poems and short stories related to the Pennsylvania "Dutch" speech, customs and sayings. I think they might be interesting to many of the readers.

If you have items you'd like to share, please send them to me and I'll include them also. My mailing and E-mail addresses will be listed at the end. Today it's a poem:

OUR TALK

Our talk ain't so for fanciness,
But plain, it makes just right.
It ain't so good dressed up in print,
But from the heart it comes out bright.

It gets around to all the things
We know and have to say,
It sticks to us like boowalce,
It's as rich s good red clay.

When people listen once they think
We don't know English none,
But at the County Fair you see
The prize our Melly won.

You can't redd up the world and make
All people talk the same.
The Pennsylvania Deitsch is ourn,
And yourn is what you name.

Du konnst net mocha, sie gehnet gleih,
Olla bleiwa so, gel net?
Die gaul geh zu die scheira hin,
Und ich zu Deitsch, you bet.

Flashback

Barges were pulled by mules on a towpath along the Pennsylvania Canal. Lewisburg was on the wrong side of the river to enjoy the major benefits of the Pennsylvania West Branch Canal. In 1833 a crosscut canal was completed, linking Lewisburg to the Pennsylvania canal system. It was three-quarters of a mile in length. (Union County Historical Society)

Petty Still Nascar's Favorite Driver

By Gerald Hodges/the Racing Reporter

NASCAR announced this past week that Richard Petty is still the sport's favorite driver, but along with that message came several new ones.

Fans of the future can expect new and more advanced race car technology, younger drivers, and oh yes, fewer seats at NASCAR events.

"We want to be more nimble in what we do from a technology standpoint, be able to quickly react to the emerging technologies that are out there," said NASCAR Senior V.P. Steve O'Donnell. "We want to be a proving ground. When you look at NASCAR, we feel like no sport is better positioned to really take technology, showcase it in front of some of the toughest conditions that exist in the world, and we think we're poised to do that."

Changes could be made in race qualifying procedures, although no specifics were discussed in last Monday's news media briefing. Officials plan to make much more pit-road data available to fans, perhaps by monitors or digital displays above pit stalls and through television and cell-phone displays.

O'Donnell said change will also come in the way the sport is officiated and the way fans receive information, both at track and via live television broadcasts.

Some changes will take effect in 2014, and others will be in place for the 2015 season.

O'Donnell said making core changes in the rule book will remove a lot of gray zones. There will be computer-aided drawings, simplifying the objectivity of the rule book.

"NASCAR has been criticized sometimes for being somewhat subjective," he said. "When we look at the rule book in the future, we want to categorize penalties so they're listed out in the rule book. We think it will be much more clearly defined not only for us and our competitors but for the race fans, as well."

"We are not trying to put teams in such a box that they can't innovate. That's what our sport was founded on, was innovation, being able to work and find that advantage."

More technology means higher costs for teams. That translates into fewer, small one-car race teams.

For several years NASCAR has sponsored the "Drive for Diversity," a program where young Cuban, Mexican, Puerto Rican, Afro-Americans, and female drivers are brought into the sport.

They have asked the major racing teams to include this young, diversified mix of candidates into their driver lineups. NASCAR's stated goal is to embrace the 18-25 age group.

Where does this strategy leave the average, hard-working, middle-age, white male/female race fan?

By the removal of seats, tracks hope to raise the prices and make tickets "be in demand," as they once were.

When 30 per cent of the seats are removed from a track, will the average fan still be able to afford the inflated prices?

NASCAR's message sounds great. It's the typical, shiny, NASCAR public relations package. But it might contain some flaws.

Will a sufficient number of young fans that NASCAR is courting be there when the older ones are gone?

The haunting question for me is who's going to fill Richard Petty's shoes?

SPEED TO BECOME FOX SPORTS 1

The SPEED Channel, which has carried the NASCAR truck races, will soon be known as Fox Sports 1.

The channel which previously carried only racing coverage will feature many other sports, in addition to racing.

Fox Sports 1 will make its debut on August 17, 2013. Fox has directly positioned the channel to be a major competitor to ESPN. There will be studio programs including the daily sports news program Fox Sports Live (which will compete directly against ESPN's SportsCenter), Crowd Goes Wild (formerly Rush Hour), a new early-evening program hosted by Regis Philbin, and Fox Football Daily.

Beginning in 2014, Fox Sports 1 will air 26 weeks worth of regular season Major League Baseball games and coverage of select post-season games (the Fox network will air significantly fewer games as a result).

Beginning in 2015, Fox Sports 1 will air select live NASCAR

Sprint Cup Series races. LOGANO IS CHICAGO NATIONWIDE WINNER

Joey Logano saved the best for last in winning Sunday's Nationwide race at Chicagoland Speedway.

Logano took the lead from Sam Hornish after a restart with 15 laps remaining in the 200-lap race, and went on to his 20th career Nationwide victory.

"We had it when we needed it," said Logano. "Throughout the race, the car kept getting a little better and a little better. On that last restart, I had what I needed to win."

Sam Hornish, the polesitter led the most laps, but near the end, it was Logano with the faster car, and Hornish had to settle for second.

Austin Dillon finished third.

"We needed just a little bit more today," Dillon said. "The team gave me a good handling car, but we didn't quite have enough to catch Joey there at the end."

Elliott Sadler was fourth, followed by Brian Vickers, Parker Kligerman, Trevor Bayne, Justin Allgaier, Brad Sweet, and Matt Crafton.

On Saturday, July 6 Ryan Hoke fulfilled his goal and completed his Eagle Scout Project. Hoke created a Veterans Memorial at the Penn Valley Airport in Selinsgrove. The memorial is engraved with the words, "To honor Veterans and their families from our past, present, and future. Your service is forever appreciated." Below the quote are five military insignias and three pieces of artwork. The image on the top of the memorial is a Corsair airplane, a military aircraft used in both World War II and the Korean War. The bottom left image depicts a soldier running with a gun. Hoke selected that image because it is on his grandfather's Korean War plaque. On the bottom right of the monument is the image of "The Praying Soldier." The last inscription reads: "May God Bless America."

The Dedication Ceremony was held at 11 am and included a Veterans Color Guard and a 21 gun salute, as well as several politicians and local clergy taking part in the event. Boy Scout Troop 441 of Kratzerville, Civil Air Patrol Squadron 522, Penn Valley Airport Authority, Joint Honor Guard American Legion Post 25 and VFW Post 6631, Rev. Chuck Melton, Rev. Evan Ryder, and Kathy Bartol also contributed to this special moment.

The idea for the project was sparked for Hoke over the past three years while Boy Scout Troop 441 of Kratzerville parked cars at the Penn Valley Airport for their annual Air Show. Hoke explained, "At the Air Show I saw many Veterans and their families and I was immediately inspired to create a Veterans memorial in honor of them for my Eagle Scout Project." He then went to the airport for his 8th grade Career Day and proposed his idea to airport manager, Jim Taylor.

"When Ryan proposed the idea to the Airport Authority," reports Charlie Benner of the Penn Valley Airport Authority, "the decision was unanimous, unanimous, unanimous!" Benner continued, "We felt it was important because for the past several years we have tried to bring back the old military planes-for both veterans and for their families. The veterans could bring their children and grandchildren to see a glimpse into their service to the country through those planes." Benner concluded, "This could not have been a better way to honor those veterans!"

The project took approximately six months to complete. Many tasks were undertaken to successfully complete the project. Hoke had to find a boulder supplier and an engraver, raise money through donation requests and VFW/American Legion presentations, coordinate delivery dates and work days, send out thank-you notes to all donors, and make payments to material distributors. Due to the generosity of the community, Hoke was able to expand on his project and include a 20 ft. flagpole, stone bench, lighting, concrete bases for the memorial and the flagpole, and extra river-rock to complete the landscaping. Additional funds not needed for the project will be donated to the Wounded Warrior Project (www.woundedwarriorproject.org). Hoke was assisted by his father and Jim Taylor, manager of the airport. Prior to the Dedication Ceremony, Zartman Construction donated a lift to put the memorial, an engraved 4.5 ton mountain stone boulder, into place by the main terminal. The unveiling of the memorial was held during the Dedication Ceremony. "The boulder was 5 tons when I first saw it at Gustin's Stone Supply in Lakewood, PA. After engraving the boulder weighed 4.5 tons," said Hoke.

Harold W. Aucker, Commander District 17 of the PA VFW and Quartermaster of Post 6631 in Selinsgrove helped to plan the Dedication Ceremony. The monument was placed at Penn Valley Airport because "a lot of veterans are amateur pilots and would come through here to fly or take lessons."

Jeff Ditzler, a representative from Sen. Pat Toomey's office presented two awards at the Dedication. He commented, "I am happy to come and recognize this young man for what he has done and the Selinsgrove community for being able to come together to honor veterans with this new memorial."

Commissioner Joe Kantz was also present for the ceremony and shares the Eagle Scout bond with Ryan Hoke. He remarked, "This is another monument to those who have served. It is important that we do remember those who have served so they know they are not forgotten." He acknowledged Hoke's efforts "Good people do good things!"

Commissioner Peggy Chamberlain-Roup was overcome with emotion during the ceremony as tears rolled down her cheeks.

Ryan's father, Doug is proud of all that his son has accomplished. "Ryan has put many hours into this effort. He has a real respect for those who have served, are serving, and are yet to serve our country, and wanted to honor them in some way. Since he had seen so many veterans at past airshows he felt this memorial was a great way to show that respect. We are very proud of his dedication and determination to see his vision become a reality."

Ryan joined the Boy Scouts of America as a Tiger Cub while he was in first grade. He is a member of Boy Scout Troop 441 of Kratzerville. As a Boy Scout, he has successfully earned 22 merit badges and he was initiated into the Order of the Arrow.

A sophomore at Selinsgrove High School, Hoke is a member of the Selinsgrove football team and also participates in Track and Field. He is a Distinguished Honor Roll student. Ryan is the son of Doug and Lauri Hoke of Winfield.

SUN Tech Students Win National Medals

Four SUN Area Technical Institute students took top honors at the 49th annual SkillsUSA National Conference and Championships, held in Kansas City, Missouri from June 24th - June 29th.

Over 6000 outstanding career and technical education students joined in the excitement of hands-on competition in ninety four different trade, technical and leadership fields. The contests are designed and planned by representatives of labor and management to recognize the achievements of career and technical education students and to encourage them to strive for excellence and pride in their chosen professions. In order to be eligible to compete at the National Conference, contestants must have taken first place honors at their state level.

Receiving first place, national gold medal honors was cosmetology student, Amanda Torres in Action Skill. Action Skill is a contest in which competitors demonstrate and explain an entry-level skill used in their occupational training area. Torres received an almost perfect score in both the preliminary and final rounds.

Third place, bronze medal honors went to cosmetology student Ashley Wilson and her model Alicia Boutin.

Ms. Wilson won her bronze medal competing in the area of Esthetics, which evaluates the contestant's excellence and professionalism in skin care and makeup application. In this competition, contestants were evaluated on facial massage, skin treatments, day time makeup, fantasy makeup application, an oral presentation and a written exam. In addition to her medal, Wilson won $500.00 worth of trade-related tools and equipment.

Taking fourth place honors in Collision Repair Technology was Levi Cross. Cross competed against 41 other competitors in metal and plastic repair, welding skills, structural analysis, estimating, job interviewing and took an ASE written examination.

Taking sixth place honors was cosmetology student Kayla Dunkle and her model Marianna Mangiapane, in the area of Nail Care. Ms. Dunkle was evaluated on her professionalism, pedicure procedures, sculpted nail applications, gel nail applications, polish techniques, nail art design, and both a written and oral assessment.

In addition to their top ten placements, all four of the SUN Tech competitors received National Skill Point Certifications, which means their scores in their individual competitive areas exceeded benchmarks established by business and industry for professionalism and excellence.

Amanda Torres is a SUN Tech graduate and a graduate of Shikellamy High School. Ashley Wilson, Kayla Dunkle, Alicia Boutin and Mariana Mangiapane are all SUN Tech graduates and graduates of Mifflinburg High School, and Levi Cross is a SUN Tech graduate and a graduate of Mid-West High School.

The students were accompanied to the National Conference, by cosmetology instructor and SUN Tech Skills USA Advisor, Crystal Gutschall, and Collision Repair Instructor Donald Gunther.

Public Pension System: Pennsylvania's Titanic

The problem with government debt is that at some point the creditors will expect to get paid, and when they demand payment, Pennsylvania's taxpayers are on the hook. Pennsylvania's two public pension systems, the State Employees' Retirement System (SERS) and the Public School Employees' Retirement System (PSERS), are currently $47 billion underfunded. For perspective, the 2013-14 Commonwealth General Fund budget is $28 billion. It is undeniable that this liability is unacceptable.

The very nature of a system that allows for politicians to make alterations for political gain is reason enough to fix the system. Allowing for a system that relies on an annual 7.5 percent investment return in order to remain solvent is foolish and an irresponsible gamble with taxpayers' money. Ultimately, if that 7.5 percent return is not realized, the people handed the bill are again, the taxpayers.

Special interests are saying that the retirement system for public employees should not be structured in the same fashion that the taxpayers in the private sector fund their retirement. For some reason, some lobbyists, unions and special interests feel that those who derive their paycheck from the taxpayers deserve a retirement system that is vastly different from those who ultimately fund the public system.

Over the past several decades, businesses, including those in this area, have converted their retirement plans to defined contribution plans. Private industry is not able to pass the unpredictable costs of defined benefit retirement plans to their customers, while the public system in Pennsylvania is able to pass costs onto the taxpayers through increased taxes.

While some say let Act 120 work, Act 120 is itself, although billed as pension reform when signed into law a few years ago, is a political ploy meant to push the responsibility past another election cycle, not to address the root cause of the crisis. Nothing in Act 120 relieves the taxpayer from guaranteeing the system if an indefinite 7.5 percent annual rate of return is not realized.

The system is fundamentally broken. Enrolling future employees into this insolvent system and expecting to save it is the equivalent of adding passengers to the Titanic to keep it from sinking.

Generations

Keller Budget Remarks Thank PA Taxpayers

Rep. Fred Keller (R-85th District) addressed the Pennsylvania House of Representatives on Sunday and gave thanks to the Pennsylvania taxpayers, who's hard earned monies are put towards the 2013-2014 State General Fund Budget.

"As I have in previous budget remarks, I say thank you to the Pennsylvania taxpayers for generating the revenue that funds this Commonwealth. As a steward of your hard-earned tax dollars, I appreciate your work, compassion and generosity.

"The people insisting this budget doesn't spend enough had better be prepared to explain to their constituents why government spending must increase at a higher rate than taxpayer earnings. While opponents of the spending plan will use catchy phrases to try to deceptively argue in favor of raising taxes, they forget that every dollar the Commonwealth collects in taxes, it is first taken from a fellow Pennsylvanian.

"While some are saying 'Taxpayer work harder so we can take more of what you've earned,' those of us who voted in support of this budget say, 'We appreciate you and thank you for funding our Commonwealth.'"
